Clinton inspects Northwest

WOODLAND, Wash. — President Clinton inspected the mud-coated Pacific Northwest by helicopter and on foot Wednesday, comforting victims of the region's worst flooding in decades. The administration said America was suffering a record winter of natural disasters.

"I hope you will keep your spirits up," Clinton declared. "This will pass and it will get better and we'll do everything we can to help."

Retired trucker Douglas Jungnickel escorted Clinton through the ruins of his modest home where waters had reached chest-high last week. Jungnickel's World War II uniform was drying on a hanger outside. "He invited me into his indoor swimming pool," Clinton joked.

Standing in his still-sodden yard, Jungnickel said, "To see you out here with ordinary people like us — it's going to give people faith and comfort all around. ... I hope everybody in all the little towns in the country can see this on television."

Outside, the president addressed a neighborhood crowd and pledged to "move as quickly as possible to do as much as we can — everything we're allowed to do within the law to help you rebuild and to go on with your lives."

Woodland was the first stop on a long day of travel taking Clinton to flood-stricken Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

Quote of the day

"It was the plan of someone who was mentally ill and acting on his delusions."

Kindness will be practiced Friday

Jay Young
The BG News

A group of University students will make it their task to make everyone who they don't know happy Friday.

Scott Michaelis, senior elementary education major, is working to organize a random acts of kindness group. The group is encouraging professors to excuse students from classes at noon on Friday so they can get some of the coffee, hot chocolate and other items being distributed at the Education Building to make life a little better.

"We want to raise the awareness of kindness just as an idea. We're going to make an effort to go beyond just being nice, and putting it into action," Michaelis said. "This makes us feel good to do this, and I think if other people would do it they would feel good."

Michaelis said the group will also collect donations to assist those who lost property in the Rodgers Quadrangle fire earlier in the month. He said he is also hoping to find more volunteers to help with the project.

Tracy Rodriguez, junior sociology major, will be part of Friday's smile patrol offering free items to students.

"We thought it would be really nice if everyone in the community and at the University would practice random acts of kindness so we wanted to spread the word," Rodriguez said. "The only requirement is to be kind and enjoy spreading kindness."

Wayne White, sophomore environmental policy major, said he would like to like to help keep the group alive year-round.

March 15 last day to withdraw/pass

Heather Cvengros
The BG News

After signing up for a class, many students may decide that they want to drop the class whether it may be due to lack of interest or tough material.

Laura Waggoner, director of student services, registration and records, said if students wish to withdraw/pass from a class, they need to go through the college office to fill out a form and get the professor's signature.

The last day to withdraw/pass for spring semester is March 15. Waggoner said the decision is between the student and the instructor.

"Many students choose to wait until after the first exam to see where they stand as far as grades," Waggoner said. "However, students need to communicate with their instructors, who can possibly help them improve their grades and prevent dropping the course."

Waggoner added that if students drop a course after March 15, they will receive a withdraw/fail, which is calculated into their GPA as a failure.

Linda Balkum, academic advisor for the College of Business Administration, said students need to be careful because if they drop below 12 hours, which is full time, it could affect their housing and financial aid.

Conrad McRoberts, director of financial aid and student employment, said there is a huge difference between withdrawing and dropping a course concerning financial aid.

McRoberts said if a student withdraws, he or she goes from some hours, to no hours, and withdraws totally from the University.

"We need to consider what time it is in the semester,"

Man claims schizophrenia defense in dual murder trial

Michael Tighe
The Associated Press

DEDHAM, Mass. — John C. Salvi III's lawyer told a jury Wednesday that Salvi is a schizophrenic who was driven to kill two abortion clinic workers by delusions of a conspiracy against Catholics.

Prosecutors portrayed the shooting rampage as the work of a man in full control of his senses.

Salvi, who was raised a Catholic, believed Roman Catholics were being persecuted by Freemasons, the Mafia and the Ku Klux Klan, defense attorney J.W. Carney Jr. said. Carney said the Dec. 30, 1994, shootings were triggered by the murders of Catholic priests in Algeria just days earlier.

"It was the plan of someone who was mentally ill and acting on his delusions," Carney said in his opening statement at Salvi's murder trial.

Salvi, 23, of Hampton, N.H., is charged with killing two receptionists and wounding five other people at the Planned Parenthood and Preterm Health Services clinics in the Boston suburb of Brookline.

If convicted, he faces life in prison without parole. If acquitted by reason of insanity, Salvi would be sent to a mental institution and could be released when found sane.

In his opening statement, prosecutor John Kivlan said Salvi had deliberately targeted the Brookline clinics, buying 1,000 hollow-point bullets "used primarily for killing."

Maps found in Salvi's truck highlighted access roads to the Brookline clinics, along with the names and addresses of other clinics in Hartford, Conn., and Alexandria, Va., the prosecutor said. Kivlan also noted that Salvi got a haircut in New Hampshire after his description was released.

"Mr. Salvi is legally sane," Kivlan said. "He is responsible for his actions."

The families and fiances of the murdered women, Shannon Lowney, 25, and Lee Ann Nichols, 38, were in the courtroom. Lowney's mother cried as Kivlan detailed the shootings.

Salvi's mother and father also attended; their son stared at the defense table and occasionally scanned the crowded courtroom.

The first witness, Planned Parenthood medical assistant Anjana Agrawal, described how Salvi rang the buzzer at the clinic door and Lowney let him in. He said the two exchanged words she couldn't make out, then Salvi pulled a rifle from his coat.

"He pointed it directly at Shannon ... aimed and fired," Agrawal said. "I tried to move my body to get through that doorway. ... He moved to the left and pointed the gun directly at me ... and I took two bullets in my right side."

She cried when prosecutors showed her a photograph of Lowney's bullet-riddled body lying on the floor. She told jurors

Ohio judge suspended after positive drug test

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — A judge, suspended while awaiting sentencing on a drug-dealing conviction, has been jailed after failing a drug test.

Michael Gallagher, 39, pleaded guilty Dec. 19 to distributing less than an ounce of cocaine to an undercover agent. At that time, the Cuyahoga County Common Pleas judge admitted he had a drug abuse problem and was placed in a treatment facility.

But Gallagher tested positive for cocaine and marijuana in a random screening and was kicked out of the program. U.S.

District Judge Lesley Brooks Wells, on Tuesday, revoked Gallagher's bond and ordered him jailed.

Wells found that Gallagher violated the conditions of his bond and "is unlikely to abide by any condition or combination of conditions of release." Gallagher was suspended from the bench and free on bond since his arrest Aug. 3, but he has not resigned and is still being paid.

The Ohio Supreme Court will not initiate disciplinary proceedings until he is sentenced. The law doesn't consider a person

Letters to the Editor

Bitter bachelor needs some love

Oh my goodness! Write the president, Mr. Weisbrod has come up with a solution to all the nation's problems concerning STD's, unwanted pregnancies, adoption, abortion, blowing up abortion clinics and the fact that our nation is torn.

Do away with Valentine's Day! After all, it's the only time anyone has sex, right?

Sorry Aaron, if you won't be getting any on Valentine's Day this year, but if you're not a "bitter bachelor" and you really think you have a good point, why did you spend half your editorial defending yourself?

I don't think your "heartless," just wrong. I agree that Valentine's Day is just a Hallmark holiday, but I think that you should take another look at what you believe to be the origin of our country's problems.

Levitate the way to disappointment

Guest Columnist

Andrea Wood

Small Government.

Enter John Hagel, presidential candidate of the Natural Law Party. C-SPAN covered a press conference starring Hagel, a quantum physicist from Harvard University, as the savior for the defunct American political system. With a giant banner in the background stating his party affiliation under a blue sky and rainbow, Hagel pitched an impressive platform.

With thousands of members worldwide, the Natural Law Party began in England in 1992, and has participated in Canadian federal elections and elections in Great Britain. According to Hagel, they are the fastest growing political party today. As an educator himself, Hagel said the Natural Law Party will implement federal educational standards, and offer parents more input into their child's learning experience. He also offered a never-before-considered plan to eliminate the deficit, and promised the Natural Law Party will enforce environmental conservation efforts. And best of all, the Natural Law Party wasn't going to play the Democrats' or Republicans' reindeer games.

Like Bob Packwood in an adult bookstore, I was sold. With his soft-spoken manner, unobtrusive grey suit and proud baldness, I was ready to cast my vote. He provided specific answers; different answers. Most of all, the Natural Law Party represented a fresh approach instead of the predictable meanderings of our two deadlocked parties who in my opinion have had plenty of chances.

Despite my hopes, I still had my cynicism to attend to. So I went to the library and I researched this Natural Law Party and Mr. Hagel a bit further.

It turns out the Natural Law Party was created based on Maharishi Mahesh Yogi's teachings on Transcendental Meditation (insert appropriate cartoon noise signaling disappointment). Beatles fans will recognize the Maharishi as the inspiration for the "White" album. I recognized the Maharishi factor as yet another embarrassing, unspeakable quirk of yet another American political party.

The Natural Law Party was wearing a mask so as not to frighten the constituents away.

According to a report in "New Statesman and Society," the Natural Law Party pledges to introduce Transcendental Meditation at all levels of higher education. They promise a "disease-free society" available to all who adhere to the Maharishi's teachings, and the defense of the nation will lie in what is referred to as the "Maharishi Effect." The disproportional popularity of The Natural Law Party among students in California is starting to make sense.

Maybe this analysis is a little harsh, but I hardly think Americans are going to jump on the guru bandwagon like Doug Henning has. Their platform calls for mass meditations which will reduce stress and therefore decrease crime, war, hunger or (INSERT ISSUE). I just don't think America is ready for such a radical change. ("Daddy! I'm levitating! I'm levitating!" v "That's great honey! The Maharishi would be so proud!")

"Nature" magazine reported in 1992 that Hagel himself is seen as somewhat of an embarrassment to the field of physics. And although he has volunteered several times to submit himself to a brain scan to compare with the scans of the other candidates, I really don't think that will be necessary.

Although I applaud their vision, I must "boo" their scheme to hide their mystical identity from the American people. What would the Maharishi say?

And I thought I found our saviors.

I'll keep a lookout.

If you want to get blunted, be blunt

Taste me you will see

-Metallica

It was a Thursday night, and I had just arrived home from a grueling day of work at school. As I typically do when I first arrive home, I looked at the clock.

"8:30..." I thought to myself. For you non-Aaron's out there, this meant that for the first time in a long time, I was going to have a chance to actually start my homework before midnight.

Then the phone rang. To answer, or not to answer. That was the question.

"Hello?" I asked cautiously. At first I didn't recognize the voice on the other end of the phone, but after a few moments I came to the realization that it was a casual friend of mine named "Beth."

She was crying. Beth and I spent the next several hours on the phone talking about why she called me and what should be done about it.

To make a long story short, Beth had come to the realization that she was addicted to marijuana.

Even though Beth and I were by no means the best of buddies, I knew that she smoked pot, and she knew that I felt as if she should slow down her pot consumption. She didn't smoke a pound and a half of pot a day, mind you, but she smoked small amounts of pot on a fairly regular basis.

After we were talking on the phone for a while, Beth admitted that I wasn't the first person she tried to call. As it ends up, I was pretty much her last resort for someone to talk to.

"I'm fing addicted to pot. I don't know what I should do, 'ya know? I mean, I can't stop smoking it. If I don't smoke some for a while I start to act like this. This is fing crazy. What should I do?" She said after we were on the phone for a little while. By this time she had stopped crying, but she was still sniffing quite a bit and was obviously extremely shaken-up about her "revelation."

"Although I know this isn't what you want to hear, I would suggest going to some sort of rehab program if you honestly want to quit," I said.

"What? Are you kidding? I couldn't picture myself going to one of those things. I mean, those places are for..."

"People who are addicted to drugs and want to quit," I said, cutting her off mid-sentence.

By the end of our conversation (which, naturally, lasted until after midnight) Beth had decided that she was going to take the steps necessary to banish her pot habit.

Two weeks later, I saw her at a mutual friend's house. She was stoned out of her gourd and trying to figure out why she was always so unmotivated to do the things she used to like to do so much.

I'm sure by this point some of you out there are wondering why this quaint little story is appearing on the opinion page. Well, it goes like this:

I personally don't smoke pot (and just for the record, I never have). It's my personal belief however, that there should be more of an effort put into studying marijuana and its various effects. For example, there's a lot of evidence out there that suggests smoking marijuana might be less harmful to smokers (as well as victims of side-stream smoke) than cigarettes.

And as we all know there are a lot of organizations out there such as N.O.R.M.L. and the Green Panthers that are pushing for the study and legalization of marijuana.

Well, I've got a humble request for those of you out there who are involved in such organizations and movements:

TRY TELLING THE FULL STORY!

Yeah, marijuana can help cure some medical ailments. Yeah, I can see why you might believe that you should have the right to smoke 'em if you got 'em.

But please, PLEASE, PLEASE, for the sake of both your validity and the validity of your cause, be willing to go public with the fact that marijuana has negative side-effects and that it can become addictive.

We all know it's true, so just fess up to it and move on, OK?

Aaron Weisbrod is the Thursday columnist guy who can be reached at aaronw@bgnet.bgsu.edu or 210 West Hall. He'd like to thank all of the people who wished him a happy Valentine's Day even though he wrote such a SATIRICAL column about it. You people rule.

Sentence set for Dayton mother

James Hannah
The Associated Press

DAYTON — A woman whose pleas for help galvanized a city-wide search for her missing daughter was convicted Wednesday of beating the girl to death and hiding her body in a watery pit.

Theressa Jolynn Ritchie protested the verdict in a statement to Montgomery County Common Pleas Judge John Kessler before she was sentenced for murdering 4-year-old Samantha Ritchie.

"I've been wrongly accused of all of these charges," she said. "Do not just put me in a corner and allow the person who done this" to go free.

Ritchie, 24, of Dayton, was sentenced to 15 years to life in prison for murder. Kessler also sentenced her to 18 months on a charge of gross abuse of a corpse; four years for tampering with evidence; 18 months for inducing panic and six months for making a false alarm. He ordered the sentences served consecutively.

A six-man, six-woman jury deliberated five hours before returning the guilty verdict.

Ritchie sat motionless, staring at her former husband Denton Ritchie — Samantha's father — as she listened to the verdict.

Denton Ritchie told the court before sentencing that his ex-wife had shown no remorse over their daughter's death.

"Jolynn betrayed the entire community, believing that her crime would be forever undetected," he said, standing at a podium in front of the bench. "I know how it happened, but I will never understand why."

He turned to look at his former wife.

"May God have mercy on your soul because I have none," he said.

Ritchie said later that the trial was emotional torture for him, but that he was satisfied with the verdict against his ex-wife.

"I can't bring Samantha back, but she [Ritchie] should have to pay for what she did, and that helps me heal," he said.

Montgomery County Prosecutor Mathias Heck Jr. said Samantha's death was heart-rending for the community, but added, "Justice has been served."

Theressa Ritchie reported her daughter missing July 18, claiming the child had disappeared from her bed during the night.

Heck had argued during the trial that Ritchie beat the girl to death with an arm cast on Ritchie's broken wrist after the child found her mother and a man having sex in the basement of their home.

"This little girl was murdered and beaten by her mother," Heck said. "Justice is due to the victim."

Decline in anti-Semitic acts in Ohio

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS — Reports of harassment and vandalism directed at Jews declined 29 percent in Ohio in 1995, the Anti-Defamation League said Wednesday.

The league, in its annual audit of anti-Semitic incidents, said 50 acts of violence, threats or harassment were reported in Ohio last year, compared with 70 in 1994. There were 17 reports of vandalism in 1995, compared with 24 the year before, the league said.

Nationwide, there were 1,116 acts of assault and harassment and 727 reports of vandalism directed at Jews in 1995, a decline of 11 percent, the league said. A total of 2,066 acts occurred in 1994.

"The overall decline of anti-Semitic incidents, the first in three years and the largest in 10 years, is encouraging," said Abraham Foxman, ADL national director.

Fitzpatrick bribery case concludes

Former Ohio trade school head accused of bribing Lukens

Katherine Rizzo
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- Prosecutors on Wednesday wrapped up their case against John Fitzpatrick, the Ohio trade school operator accused of bribing then-Rep. Don-ald Lukens.

Fitzpatrick, 40, of Middletown, Ohio, has been on trial for more than five weeks on charges of bribery, lying to a grand jury and conspiring to cover up student aid fraud.

The government offered its final rebuttal witnesses on Wednesday, and U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler read jurors a long list of instructions for them to consider before hearing closing arguments.

Fitzpatrick has argued that $20,000 he gave Lukens while in office, plus another $3,750 paid to ex-Rep. Lukens, amounted to charity for a man with big debts and no job prospects.

Prosecutors said Fitzpatrick gave Lukens money and in return sought help for his troubled trade school, Cambridge Technical Institute, which was on the brink of losing its eligibility for federal student aid programs when it went out of business.

Fitzpatrick testified that the school floundered because bad publicity -- over a lawsuit by students who claimed their diplomas were worthless -- caused enrollment to drop, and that he discovered only after the fact that the school's owner had been taking federal grants for more students than actually attended classes.

Fitzpatrick said he falsified records on the orders of CTI owner Henry Whitesell only after consulting with a lawyer, and then only to prevent destruction of incriminating files.

He said he preserved the unaltered original files for about two years, until state officials said they had no use for them.

However, by law, all such records had to be preserved for five years.

At the time Fitzpatrick and Whitesell gave money to Lukens, he was just months from the end of his congressional career, having been found guilty of contributing to the unruledness of a minor, based on a teen-ager's claim that he'd paid her for sex.

Toxin release is lower, says EPA

Jeri Waters
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Manufacturers are releasing fewer toxins into the environment each year, the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency said Wednesday.

In 1994, manufacturers released about 183 million pounds of toxic chemicals into the environment or transferred the toxins to other locations for treatment and disposal. That's a 2.9 percent decrease from 1993, when 218 million pounds of toxins were released or transferred, the EPA said in its annual Toxic Release Inventory.

Jeff Skelding of the Ohio chapter of the Sierra Club was unimpressed by the figures.

"That is certainly going in the right direction, but for a heavy industrial state like Ohio, a 2.5 reduction is not necessarily something companies should be touting as a significant accomplishment," Skelding said. There also are loopholes in the TRI which allow companies to inaccurately report their toxin release figures, he said.

"It may be that many of the chemicals they use are not reportable chemicals under the TRI. Industry is lobbying heavily to remove many of the chemicals that are on the reporting list, and that's a bad sign," Skelding said. Since TRI reporting began in 1987, the EPA said releases and transfers in Ohio have dropped by 50.6 percent. In 1987, manufacturers reported 453 million pounds of toxins released or transferred.

"The continued efforts of manufacturers throughout Ohio have led once again to significant reductions in the release of toxic chemicals," said Donald Schregardus, Ohio EPA director.

Manufacturers must report to the EPA the amount of toxins they have released each year into the air, water, land, wastewater treatment plants or transferred to other locations for treatment or disposal. More than 1,600 manufacturers report to the EPA, up from 1,400 in 1987.

The TRI includes information about the company's voluntary efforts to recycle and reduce pollution at the source. In 1994, about 462 companies began activities to help reduce hazards to the public and the environment.

Ohio EPA guidelines require that about 300 chemicals released in certain amounts be reported by certain manufacturers. In Ohio, 180 chemicals were reported in 1994.

The U.S. EPA has added 286 chemicals to the list and plans to expand the types of manufacturers that must report. Newly added chemicals are to be included in reports due July 1.

New trial ahead for convicted murderer

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- A woman convicted of murdering her 4-year-old son in 1991 must get a new trial, the state Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

Edna Mae Engle, of Fairfield County, told investigators in 1991 that her husband, John Engle Jr., had poured boiling water on their son Christopher, who died two days later. Mrs. Engle did not seek medical attention for Christopher, one of 10 children, and the couple continued to collect welfare benefits and food stamps for the boy.

Mrs. Engle later pleaded no contest to murder, obstruction of justice, forgery and other charges as part of a plea bargain. A Fairfield County Common Pleas judge sentenced her to 15 years to life on the murder charge and 19 and one-half years on the other charges.

When she pleaded to the reduced charges, her lawyer, the prosecutor and the court made statements reflecting that she planned to appeal the conviction. But the 5th Ohio District Court of Appeals refused to consider an appeal based on the trial court's refusal to consider a defense based on the battered woman syndrome and duress. The appellate court ruled that Mrs. Engle had waived her rights to such appeals when she pleaded no contest.

"She was powerless to defend herself and her children because of what was going on in the home," said Kort Gatterdam, an assistant state public defender who now represents Mrs. Engle.

Gatterdam said Mrs. Engle was beaten by her husband and coerced into participating in the attempted cover-up of their son's death.

"When a defendant enters a plea in a criminal case, the plea must be made knowingly, intelligently and voluntarily," Justice Craig Wright wrote in the unanimous opinion.

"Failure on any of those points renders enforcement of the plea unconstitutional under both the United States Constitution and the Ohio Constitution."

The ruling does not affect John Engle's conviction.

she still has a bullet lodged between her heart and spine.

Other witnesses testified that after shooting Agrawal, Salvi turned around and sprayed the waiting area with bullets. The witnesses said Salvi backed out of the clinic still shooting.

In his opening statement, Carney told jurors Salvi's schizophrenia had been evident for years. He said Salvi was driven to attack the clinics by reports about the killing of four Catholic priests in Tizi-Ouzou, Algeria, on Dec. 27, 1994. An Islamic guerilla faction took responsibility for the murders.

tion deadline, but we have very limited free housing and very limited space," Helizer said.

"After the event, we are going up to New Hampshire for the presidential primary on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday," Helizer said.

The purpose of this event is voter education.

Youth Vote is hoping to get 50 percent of registered 18 to 24 year-olds out to vote this election, said Ivan Frishberg, co-founder of Youth Vote.

"You act as doctors," Carney said. "See if you make the diagnosis of schizophrenia based on what you hear."

Also Wednesday, Judge Barbara Dortch-Okara ruled that photographers can take still photographs of the trial but asked them not to photograph Agrawal and two other witnesses, or a doctor who works at one of the clinics.

Dortch-Okara said she wanted to protect the witnesses and the doctor. She also asked the media not to print or broadcast the doctor's name, and lawyers for news organizations agreed to the request.

"I think it's a realistic goal," he said.

In 1992, 43 percent of eligible voters turned out to vote.

According to Frishberg, education, environment and the economy are what the candidates see as the focus of young people.

"Seventy percent of college freshmen are concerned with whether or not they will be able to afford college in four years," Frishberg said.

The candidate who comes out and talks about how we can actually afford education will get the young people out to vote, Frishberg said.

"We feel young people have the vision to lead us into the future," Helizer said.

Anyone interested in attending the event on Feb. 16 to 18 can call the Boston office of Youth Vote at (614) 496-5966, or Washington DC at (202) 234-5994. They can also be reached by e-mail at the address, yv96@access.digex.net, Helizer added.

Police caution women about serial rapist

Chuck Bartels
The Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK — A "blue light rapist" and others mimicking him have raped, accosted or chased more than a dozen women since November, and State Police are warning women about pulling over for unmarked cars at night. In communities from northeastern Arkansas to northern Louisiana, a predator using a police-style flashing blue light has pulled over women traveling alone. A 15-year-old cheerleader was raped after a basketball game last month by a man driving a white Oldsmobile with a blue light.

"People in Pine Bluff are scared," said Debbie Workman, a receptionist at an office in charge of collecting court fines. "I don't go out at night without my husband."

The assaults grew steadily worse before last month's rape. A woman in St. Francis County was assaulted Nov. 30; another woman drove away Dec. 4 after a man who stopped her near Brinkley got out of his car wearing a mask. The 15-year-old was raped Jan. 9 near Forrest City.

A blue light has been involved in at least nine other incidents in which the women escaped unharmed.

Because the incidents have occurred over a wide area, police suspect that some of them were carried out by copycats.

In an undetermined number of other cases, women have reported that men without blue lights flashed their headlights or honked to get them to pull over.

State Police are urging women to report any suspicious activity and are warning those traveling not to stop for an unmarked car until they are in a well-lighted area with several people around.

That's advice Workman said she's following.

"I'm not the kind of person that's going looking for trouble," she said Wednesday.

The instructions have caused problems for Arkansas' township constables, said Harry "Dusty" Rhodes, a constable for 20 years and president of the state constable association.

"We can't do our duty the way we should. No one wants to stop," he said. Constables, who typically deliver summonses, are usually unpaid and untrained but have the power to make certain traffic stops.

They are not required under state law to wear uniforms, but they must carry a badge and have a marked vehicle.

Man stirs after eight-year coma

Michelle Williams
The Associated Press

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — They waited 7 1/2 years, sometimes sitting vigil at the bedside of their son, brother and father, a police officer who took a bullet in the forehead and drifted all that time in the shadows of coma.

They never gave up hope Gary Dockery would somehow pull through. And this week it seemed all prayers were answered when he woke up, spoke to his sister and cracked jokes as if no time had passed.

"I looked up at him and he had a look I had never seen before," Lisa Dockery said through a hospital spokeswoman Wednesday. "He seemed so at ease and his eyes were wide open."

"I'm your sister," she said.

"Uh-huh," he responded.

"You're talking!" she exclaimed.

"I sure am," he answered brightly.

"There's not but one way to describe it," said family friend Tim Thompson. "It's a miracle of God."

But the miracle may prove an ending rather than a beginning:

Lost Aspirations

Volunteers, staff and the media watch as Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, announces his decision to withdraw from the presidential race from the Manchester, N.H., headquarters of Gramm for President Wednesday.

one last chance to say goodbye. Doctors tell the family the pneumonia now wracking Dockery's lungs will kill him without surgery, but anesthesia may well sedate forever the last working parts of his brain.

"This isn't a success story," said his son Sean, a little dazed from the emotions of the last days and an onslaught of calls from reporters who learned Wednesday of Dockery's apparent recovery. "He's very sick."

On Sept. 7, 1988, Patrol Officer

Dockery answered a trouble call in Walden, a mountain town 15 miles north of Chattanooga. He was shot point-blank with a .22-caliber derringer as he stood talking to the 911 caller in his driveway.

The shooter, Samuel Frank Downey, now 68, told officers he'd placed the bogus call to get back at police for reprimanding him about noise after neighbors complained. Downey was sentenced to 37 years in prison and will be eligible for parole this May.

When he awoke Monday, Dockery remembered neither the shooting nor taking the Walden police job just three months before. He does recall his divorce, working as a security guard for the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, and the eight years he spent with the Lookout Mountain police.

All those years in a coma, Dockery communicated occasionally by blinking "yes" and "no" answers to questions.

Doctors can detect drugs' effects on AIDS patients in six months

Daniel Q. Haney
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Measuring the amount of AIDS virus in infected people's bodies can greatly speed up the job of figuring out whether experimental drugs actually work, doctors say.

In the past, AIDS researchers have had to wait several years to see if new medicines delayed the onset of the disease or extended patients' lives. They have also measured the level of disease-fighting white blood cells in the body, but that has proved to be a poor predictor of how patients will fare.

With drug developers and others pushing for a more rapid means of gauging whether a new medicine is working, one method that recently has become common is measuring the amount of virus circulating in patients' blood.

Many experts believe that if virus levels plummet quickly after therapy begins, the medicine is likely to be helpful. A new study shows for the first time this is true.

The report, published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, suggests that by measuring the amount of virus, doctors may know within six months whether the drug is having a positive effect.

The study was conducted by Dr. William A. O'Brien and others from the West Los Angeles Veterans Affairs Medical Center and involved testing blood stored up from an earlier study of AZT, an AIDS drug. That study showed that taking AZT slowed the progression of the viral infection to full-blown AIDS.

The level of virus in the blood turned out to be far more important than the number of white cells.

"This is a concept people have believed for a long time: If a drug is good, it should have a big impact on viral levels. But until now, no one has proved it," O'Brien said.

The test uses PCR — polymerase chain reaction — to multiply the number of viral genes in blood samples so they can be measured. Several versions of the test are under development. None has been approved yet for routine use in doctors' offices.

When that happens, however, it may be possible to monitor how patients are responding to AIDS drugs. If the test shows virus levels fail to drop, patients might be switched quickly to another medicine.

At an AIDS meeting last month in Washington, Dr. John W. Mellors of the University of Pittsburgh reported evidence that measuring viral levels can help predict how long before infected patients will develop full-blown AIDS.

Man sentenced to life in prison

Stephen W. Dill
The Associated Press

WILMINGTON, N.C. — A man was convicted Wednesday of mailing a pipe bomb that blew off several of his wife's fingers and injured one of her co-workers.

Jurors also found Stephan Bullis guilty of sending a second bomb to his wife's office building. That one was discovered in a mail bin and detonated after his arrest.

Tracy Bullis smiled as the verdict was read, then sobbed quietly, along with Judith Harrison, the co-worker who was slightly injured. She had cried in court last week when she removed a glove to show her mangled hand.

Bullis, 31, remained motionless. His public defender said he would likely be sentenced to life in prison, plus 40 years. He also faces a possible $1.5 million fine.

"Life means life in federal court," attorney Michael Howell said.

Prosecutors said Bullis was a cold, calculating man who was having an affair and bombed his wife July 10 after her life-insurance benefits were increased. They also said he faked his tears on the witness stand when asked his reaction to seeing his wife's mangled hand for the first time.

"Did any of you see any real tears or did you see an acting job?" Assistant U.S. Attorney John Bennett asked the jury. "I submit to you that no real tears came from that man's eyes."

The defense said evidence was circumstantial and pointed to someone else. Howell also suggested that Bullis' fingerprints had been planted on the second bomb.

The bomb left a crater in Mrs. Bullis' desk, shattered glass and scattered blood and bomb fragments around the fifth floor of Business Telecom Inc. in Raleigh, the long-distance telephone company where she worked.

Bullis, a project manager at rival MCI Telecommunications Corp., admitted on the stand that he had been having an affair. At the time of the bombing, the couple had been married five years,

Chemical-carrying train derails, ignites in flames

Larry Gerber
The Associated Press

CAJON SUMMIT, Calif. — A freight train carrying hazardous chemicals derailed and caught fire early today, killing at least one crew member, injuring at least 20 other people and closing a major highway.

The train's engineer was among the injured and one other crewman was missing after the Burlington Northern-Santa Fe Corp. train left the track shortly after 4 a.m. It touched off a spectacular fire that continued to burn intensely at midday.

"It's really ripping, really burning," said Bill Peters, California Department of Forestry spokesman. "We're not fighting it as of yet because of all the chemicals."

The dead crew member's body was pulled from the twisted, burning wreckage shortly before noon. His identity was not immediately released.

Most of the injured were police officers and transportation officials who complained of chest pains, shortness of breath and skin rashes. They were taken to several hospitals. The engineer was hospitalized in fair condition with lacerations and an injured back.

A tunnel-shaped cloud formed over the heavily traveled mountain pass as the rail cars burned, spitting flames 30 feet into the air.

The site, in the Cajon Pass, is a sparsely populated area about 15 miles north of San Bernardino. A hotel, a restaurant and a gas station were evacuated along with a few homes.

"Thank goodness for the Red Cross and coffee," one evacuated resident, June McDonald, said as she waited out the crisis at a shelter set up at the county fairgrounds in Victorville.

One witness said a fireball hundreds of feet high could be seen when the train crashed. "I was out there standing and felt a rumble. I felt the heat of the fire," said the witness, Chuck Mydlowski.

A 20-mile segment of Interstate 15, a main artery between Los Angeles and Las Vegas, was shut down in both directions, causing a commuting nightmare for motorists.

All four of the train's locomotives and 38 of its 42 cars left the track, Peters said.

The train had originated in Barstow and was headed for Los Angeles. Mike Martin, a spokesman for the Schaumburg, Ill.-based railroad, said it had five tank cars of hazardous materials including butyl acrylate, a chemical used for making paints and adhesives that irritates the eyes, nose and throat.

Some tankers were among the burning cars.

Patrick Davis, who lives near the crash site, said he and his brother-in-law pulled the engineer from the wreckage.

"I couldn't see anybody else and one engine was on fire."

New format ahead for '60 Minutes'

Opinionated Ivins, O'Rourke, Crouch slated to give weekly commentary

Scott Williams
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Searching for an edge that will boost ratings, "60 Minutes" is taking on three highly opinionated commentators: Molly Ivins, P.J. O'Rourke and Stanley Crouch.

"60 Minutes" also is going into year-round production to develop more breaking stories, executive producer Don Hewitt said Wednesday.

"For all intents and purposes, the rerun season is over for '60 Minutes,'" said Hewitt, who created and launched TV's longest-running prime-time program on a nine-month production schedule 28 seasons ago.

"I think we'll be more on the cutting edge," Hewitt added. "We're going to research, report, shoot, edit and air a story in less than a week, and I dare say there will be occasions when we do it in less than a day."

Hewitt said the additions of Ivins, O'Rourke and Crouch won't affect Andy Rooney's job, or that of the other regulars — Mike Wallace, Morley Safer, Ed

Bradley, Lesley Stahl, Steve Kroft.

Using a format reminiscent of the program's "Point Counterpoint," which featured Shana Alexander and James J. Kilpatrick, the show will pit Ivins, a celebrated writer for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and an outspoken liberal, against a conservative, either Crouch or O'Rourke.

"We're going to call it 'Ivins & Crouch/Crouch & Ivins,' or 'Ivins & O'Rourke/O'Rourke & Ivins,' which sounds like a law firm," said Hewitt. The feature should begin in the next few weeks.

O'Rourke, former editor-in-chief of the National Lampoon humor magazine, writes for Rolling Stone and is the author of "Give War a Chance," "Parliament of Whores" and other humorous works.

Crouch, who writes about politics, jazz and literature, was nominated last month for a National Book Award for his collection of essays, "The All-American Skin Game."

"Point Counterpoint" which last aired in 1979, was quite successful, Hewitt said. "I can't quite remember why we stopped doing it."

Hewitt said "60 Minutes," which traditionally has taped on Thursdays and Fridays, will tape on Thursdays and Sundays to accommodate late-breaking stories. To oversee them, former "60 Minutes" producer Josh Howard is returning to the broadcast from the CBS News Productions unit.

"60 Minutes" is aiming for its 19th consecutive season in the Top 10 despite declining ratings over the past three seasons.

Hewitt said the changes will make his show more competitive with other network magazines. NBC has announced plans for a Sunday edition of its "Dateline NBC" franchise.

"NBC News and ABC News are first-rate organizations," Hewitt said. "They've been trying to clone us for 28 years. As good as they are, some day they may make it."

Producer found to have staged documentaries

Terrence Petty
The Associated Press

BONN, Germany -- After German men in Ku Klux Klan robes burned a cross in a 1994 TV documentary, investigators went hunting for what they thought was a local chapter of the white-robed racists.

Instead, they uncovered a vast hoax. They say Michael Born, one of Germany's most prolific free-lance documentary producers, had some pals dress up like Klansmen because he knew the story would sell.

After digging further, prosecutors found that Born had concocted and sold at least 22 documentaries to German television from 1991 until his arrest last December. Their allegations are astounding.

In one, Born paid an actor to stalk and kill a domestic cat. In another, he hired Albanians to pose as Kurdish fighters. Born interviewed friends and said they were Austrian terrorists. He staged an attack on a supposed Somali village.

Investigators say he sold bogus documentaries to at least three cable TV networks and made at least $204,000. He was arrested Dec. 12 for investigation of fraud, a charge that could bring up to 15 years in prison.

Prosecutor Norbert Weise said Born usually chose topics that had an element of truth, then created his own scenarios so the stories would be more compelling.

"He mixed fiction with reality in his films," Weise said.

Born admits he faked the segments, but offers in his defense a line that sends shivers through the German news media: Many others do it too.

"I am only a small cog in the machine," Born, 37, told the Bild am Sonntag newspaper.

It's one of the biggest scandals to hit the German media since 1983, when Stern magazine published excerpts of what turned out to be forged diaries of Adolf Hitler.

Born claims he was encouraged to fake documentaries by an official at one of the networks, and suggested that there are many others who are selling doctored news as they compete for ratings.

Guenther Jauck, host of the RTL cable television program that showed many of Born's segments, insisted he did not know that the videotapes had been fabricated.

Jauck's show and other programs that bought Born's work have filed criminal complaints against the producer for fraud.

And what fraud.

In a documentary broadcast April 26, 1995, Born preyed on Germans' love of animals. The segments purported to graphically illustrate a new quarry for German hunters: stray cats. Viewers saw a man with a rifle stalking a cat in a wooded area, taking aim and shooting it dead.

According to Weise, the rifle belonged to Born, the cat was from an animal shelter and the hunter was playing to the camera.

On another show, a Born documentary supposedly showed a camp in Turkey of the Kurdish Workers' Party, which has been fighting for an independent homeland. Bearded men were shown building a bomb.

Prosecutors say the bomb was never built, and the men weren't even Kurds, let alone guerrillas -- they were Albanian actors. And the filming was done in Greece, not Turkey.

In 1995, Born allegedly filmed an interview with Austrian fascists who had been sending letter bombs to politicians and celebrities. In reality, prosecutors allege, the people shown had nothing to do with the bombings, and were friends of Born who he enlisted to help.

Pro 7, the cable TV station that had planned to broadcast the piece, changed its mind because executives had doubt about its authenticity.

Ten alleged accomplices are under investigation.

Britain deploys extra army battalion

SHAWN POGATCHNIK
The Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland -- Beefing up security following an Irish Republican Army bombing last week, Britain announced Wednesday it would deploy an extra army battalion in Northern Ireland.

The 1st Battalion of the Royal Irish Regiment will be garrisoned by Friday in bases along the British-ruled province's border with the rest of Ireland. This was "a precautionary and prudent measure," a senior British army source said on condition of anonymity.

On Friday, the IRA declared an end to its 17-month cease-fire and bombed a London business district, killing two and wounding dozens. The attack poisoned the political atmosphere and revived fears of bombings and assassinations in Northern Ireland.

In Dublin, the government-sponsored Forum for Peace and Reconciliation announced Wednesday it was suspending its weekly sessions because of the blast.

The forum had been established a month after the IRA's September 1994 cease-fire to bring the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party into mainstream political debate -- but only on the understanding that the cease-fire would last.

The cease-fire had halted a quarter-century of violence between the mainly Catholic IRA, which wants Northern Ireland to become part of the Irish Republic, and "loyalists" who want the majority-Protestant province to remain a part of Britain.

Government ministers and many other Irish politicians now refuse to meet Sinn Fein leader Gerry Adams unless he can persuade the IRA's ruling council to reinstate its cease-fire, a subject aides to Irish Prime Minister John Bruton are expected to discuss Thursday with Adams.

Ireland's previous prime minister, Albert Reynolds, met Adams on Tuesday and came away confident that the cease-fire could be resurrected.

Reynolds told the Irish parliament, the Dail, that Adams could "get the IRA to return to a full cessation of violence" if the British and Irish governments first charted a new course toward multiparty negotiations on Northern Ireland's future.

During the cease-fire, Sinn Fein talked with the British government for months but never was allowed into negotiations with leaders of Northern Ireland's pro-British Protestant majority. Britain said the IRA had to show its cease-fire was "permanent" by starting to disarm first, a move rejected by Sinn Fein as surrender.

Fry feels possibilities still great for Falcons

Falcon center Curtis Fry made an interesting statement after Bowling Green's win over Notre Dame Saturday.

Fry, who just minutes earlier ended the game with an overtime goal, said he thought the Falcons could have a better season than they did a year ago.

An interesting statement, because BG lost 11 games all last season and has already lost 11 games this year with at least eight more to play. Interesting also because a year ago the Falcons finished second in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association standings and had a home ice advantage in the first round of the CCHA Playoffs.

This season the Brown and Orange sit in fifth place in the conference and face the imminent prospect of traveling to either Lake Superior, Michigan or Western Michigan for the first round of the playoffs.

Was Fry suffering from game winning goal disillusionment or recovering from the effects of laying a check on one of Notre Dame's mammoth players? The disillusionment can be ruled out because Fry had scored three game winning goals before in his career. Despite the punishment the 5 foot 8 inch junior endured checking any of the seven players that the Irish have over 6 foot 3 inches tall, his ability to reason was not affected at all.

His statement was as accurate as the shot he sneaked under the legs of Irish goaltender Matt Eisler to Saturday's game.

A year ago BG went 11-4-1 in the regular season after their Christmas tournament in Madison, Wis. The Falcons ended the regular season on a five game winning streak but only one of those wins was against a team in the upper half of the league, a 3-2 win over Lake Superior.

BG is 8-4 this year after finishing third at the Mariucci Classic in Minneapolis, Minn. They have six regular season games remaining and at least two more in the league playoffs. Of those six games, two are against Illinois-Chicago, one against Notre Dame, one against Ohio State, one on the road at Michigan State and the regular season finale at Michigan.

The Falcons should win the first four games because they are against teams with a combined record of 22-53-11 this season and all four are at the Ice Arena. Those wins would place BG at 24-11-1 overall and 18-9-1 in the CCHA heading into the last weekend of the season.

The numbers are almost identical to last year with a probable playoff trip to one of the top teams in the league still awaiting. Fry's prophecy may still come to fruition because of the Falcon's non-conference schedule earlier this year.

BG is 4-2 in non-conference games this season as opposed to 2-4 last year. Of the six non-conference games BG played a year ago, three of those games were against teams in the CCHA (due to Kent dropping its program unexpectedly). This is where the Falcons could go beyond last year's season and get to a point they have not been since 1990. That point is a berth in the NCAA Tournament.

Despite its impressive record last year the one thing that kept BG out of the tournament and allowed Denver to receive the final tournament berth was its non-conference record.

The Falcons established themselves as one of the top teams in the nation in late October defeating Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference twice at home. The following weekend BG split two games at Clarkson who is also a member of the ECAC.

The Golden Knights were ranked 13th in the WMPL Radio Coaches Poll this week and received votes in all of the four hockey polls.

BG must will rely on its wins earlier this year.

Ninkovic surprises with 34 points

Dayon who?

The Falcon sophomore center took everyone in Anderson Arena by surprise Wednesday, scoring a career-best 34 points as BG upset MAC-leading Eastern Michigan 72-70.

Shock could be a better word than surprise. Ninkovic, after scoring his previous career-high of 19 points against Western Michigan on Jan. 3, had just 35 points in the ten games since.

"I ain't never seen [sic] Dayon like that before in my life," said Falcon forward Anthony Stacey, his eyes widening. "I don't know what happened. He really played well and he really fired up. He shot the shots that he knew he could make. They were doubling me a lot, so Dayon was right there for the open jump shot."

"I really appreciate the tremendous effort by Dayon Ninkovic," BG head coach Jim

Daniels plays in memory of lost brother

Scott Brown
The BG News

Chris Daniels wouldn't have had it any other way.

His brother Antonio capped an emotional night at Anderson Arena with a leaning jumper with four seconds to go, allowing Bowling Green to capture a stunning 72-70 victory Wednesday over nationally-ranked Eastern Michigan.

Antonio Daniels returned to the Falcon lineup Wednesday following his brother Chris' tragic death last Thursday. Chris was supposed to have been in attendance for the game, where he could have seen his brother dazzle like only a Daniels can.

After Eastern Michigan had tied the game at 70 with nine seconds to go, Daniels grabbed the inbound pass and dribbled the length of the court, seemingly willing-in a short jumper with four ticks left on the clock.

The Eagles' desperation chance at the buzzer was off the mark.

"I'm just so happy for Antonio and this team," BG head coach Jim Larranaga said afterward, holding back tears. "In the 25 years that I've been in coaching, this has probably been the most difficult day ...

"To try and understand, and control your emotions, and channel them in the right direction ... that is what we asked the team to do."

Daniels finished the night with 20 points, including the team's final six during the frantic final minute. Teammate Dayon Ninkovic contributed a team season-high and personal-career high 34 points (see related story).

Derrick Dial had 17 points for the Eagles, who entered the game at 18-2 overall and 23rd in the national Associated Press poll.

"We knew this was going to be a hard game, even without the emotions," EMU coach Ben Braun said. "It's such a terrible thing that Antonio had to go through and it seemed like their team rallied around him."

Anthony Stacey was limited to just eight points -- a season-low for BG's leading scorer -- but realized it wasn't his night to shine.

"I think it went down to the last round, and Antonio knocked them out," said Falcon forward Anthony Stacey, one of Daniels' closest friends on the team. "We played this game with a lot of emotion. We knew we weren't going to lose."

It was a see-saw game throughout, but four straight foul shots by Ninkovic with just over three minutes to go -- the Eagles were in the midst of turning the ball over three straight times at that point -- allowed BG to go up for good.

Daniels began his last minute heroics by getting a partial block of Tolbert's 3-point attempt with 1:20 to go. Daniels then drove the ball inside on the other end for a pair, putting the Falcons up four.

A pair of free throws down the stretch kept the Eagles at bay momentarily, but a 3-pointer by Earl Boykins with 9.6 seconds to go tied the game at 70, setting the stage for Daniels' late heroics.

Daniels almost didn't play in the game, following an afternoon meeting with Larranaga. The team had attended Chris Daniels' funeral in Columbus YPSILANTI, Mich. -- Perfect. That's what the performance 6-2 junior Michelle Terry gave going 11-11 from the field as the Falcons downed Eastern Michigan 92-83 at Bowen Field House Wednesday night.

Terry's performance sets a new standard in field goals at Bowling Green. Her flawless shooting set a new record for field-goal percentage.

"My teammates just got me the ball where I could get a high percentage of shots," Terry said. "They got me the ball exactly where I needed it."

Terry finished the night with 23 points and five rebounds.

BG head Jaci Clark knew that if her team could get Terry the ball, that she could finish the shot. "She was perfect," Clark said. "We did a good job of getting her the ball and she finished real strong. She has a lot of ability."

With Terry hitting nothing but the bottom of the net, the Falcon guards were able to get points on the board as well.

Modell makes one certain move Reds plan to fill holes with familiar faces

David Ginsburg
The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — The search for a new nickname can wait. First, Art Modell needs to find a new coach.

Modell, owner of the Baltimore NFL franchise formerly known as the Cleveland Browns, fired coach Bill Belichick on Wednesday. He did not name a replacement, but former Baltimore Colts coach Ted Marchibroda is a possible choice for the job.

Modell may also consider Oakland Raiders assistant coach Joe Bugel or San Francisco 49ers defensive coordinator Pete Carroll to replace Belichick.

Don Shula, the winningest coach in NFL history, has removed himself from the list of candidates.

The Browns went 5-11 last season, losing seven of their final eight games after Modell announced his intention to take the franchise to Baltimore. It was Cleveland's fourth losing season in five years under Belichick.

"The move to Baltimore offers us a new beginning, a fresh start," Modell said in a statement, "and we want to do everything we can to get to a higher level of play as soon as we can."

"We've had some success with Bill, including an 11-5 playoff team in 1994. However, I believe to get to the next level, a change at head coach is necessary."

Modell planned to attend a series of meetings in Baltimore on Wednesday and did not return calls to his offices in Cleveland and Baltimore.

Belichick, meanwhile, will probably land another job in the NFL. He could end up as the defensive coordinator for Miami Dolphins coach Jimmy Johnson, although an NFL source said Belichick might be offered a job by New England Patriots coach Bill Parcells.

In a statement, Belichick, 43, expressed his gratitude to the Browns organization.

"This team has an excellent future and I wish them well," Belichick said. "I will review my options with regard to my future in the NFL."

Marchibroda coached the Baltimore Colts from 1975 to 1979, winning three AFC titles. He was dismissed by Indianapolis after the 1995 season despite guiding the Colts to a 9-7 record and a berth in the AFC title game.

Ironically, Belichick began his coaching career in 1975 with the Baltimore Colts as a special assistant to Marchibroda.

He took over the Browns job on Feb. 6, 1991, after spending 12 seasons as an assistant with the

New York Giants. Cleveland, 3-13 in 1990, went 6-10 in Belichick's initial season — losing six games by a total of 17 points.

Belichick was 37-45 with the Browns, his best season coming in 1994 when he led Cleveland into the AFC playoffs behind a defense that surrendered an NFL-low 204 points and an offensive line that allowed the fewest sacks (14) in the league. The Browns, a wild-card entry, defeated New England before losing to Pittsburgh in the second round.

The 1995 season was supposed to be even better. Modell signed free agent receiver Andre Rison and spent nearly $24 million in bonuses over the $37.1 million salary cap in an effort to get the Browns into the Super Bowl for the first time.

After a 3-1 start, the Browns were 4-4 before news of Modell's planned move to Baltimore began to leak to the media. Belichick's attempts to keep the players focused on the season were futile, and the team's slide began with a 37-10 thrashing at the hands of the visiting Houston Oilers on Nov. 5.

The game was a mere sideshow for thousands of angry fans more interested in venting their frustration against Modell than rooting for the home team. The players seemed distracted, too, as five turnovers led to the most lopsided loss of the season.

The next day, Modell formally announced his intention to move to Baltimore. The Browns' only win after that was a 26-10 rout of Cincinnati in the home finale Dec. 17.

Belichick had a no-nonsense approach to the job and rarely joked with his players. But he earned their respect, in part because of his dedication to his work.

"Bill is a great coach. The way he prepared us for games is incredible," said left tackle and team captain Tony Jones. "I can't put the blame on him for our losses last year. Bill doesn't play on Sundays."

Quarterback Vinny Testaverde said, "Unfortunately, losing your job in the National Football League is part of the business. However, getting another job quickly is also part of the business. I wish him the very best wherever he goes."

CINCINNATI — Eric Davis will be there. So will Chris Sabo.

In some respects, the Cincinnati Reds' training camp will look something like last year's gathering, when over-the-hill players like Pedro Borbon and Barbaro Garbey were trying to win jobs.

There are no replacement players this time around, but the team that made it to the NL championship series has a lot of parts to replace.

"The big focus, right now, is on center field, left field, third base, the starting rotation, the bullpen, the catchers, the bench, the new manager," general manager Jim Bowden said.

Owner Marge Schott's decision to lop several million dollars off the payroll has turned the NL Central champions into a fitting project for first-time manager Ray Knight. There are a lot of unknowns, from the top down.

While the Braves were solidifying their roster to make another run at the World Series, the Reds were shedding left fielder Ron Gant, their leading home-run hitter; starting catcher Benito Santiago; center fielder Darren Lewis; third baseman Mark Lewis; utility infielder Mariano Duncan; backup outfielder Jerome Walton and David Wells.

7-14 shooting and Sara Puthoff scored 17.

Billiter had seven rebounds while Puthoff had six.

"They might take one area away from us, but we will be able to execute on the other," Clark said of BG's ability to spread the ball around.

The first half saw BG hold the lead throughout, but the Falcons couldn't manage to put the Eagles away.

Free-throw shooting kept the Eagles close with EMU making 17 trips to the line in the half.

Eagles Kelly Moorman went 7-8 from the line the first half to pace EMU at the charity stripe. EMU got 12 of their 40 points from the line and 22 of their total points as well.

"The officials called a tight game tonight and they had 17 shots at the foul line in the first half," Clark said. "The officials put them on the line and there was nothing that we could do about that. Eastern shoots better from the line than from the field."

Holding a nine-point advantage at 33-24 in the first half, Clark brought in five players from the bench. Candy Day, Bridget Andrews, Kristi Koester, Jacki Raterman and Netta Smith all saw action early in the game.

The Eagles crept back to within 77-70 late in the second half when EMU's Besty Brown stole a pass and went coast-to-coast for the lay up.

Key in Eastern's staying withing 10 was Laura Streffling and Traci Parsons. Parsons finished with 23 points on 8-17 shooting and Streffling had 22 points with 11 rebounds.

But the EMU defense had problems stopping the Falcons' offense.

"I was disappointed in our defensive efforts," EMU head coach Paulette Stein. "Allowing BG to shoot over fifty percent in each half indicates to me that our defense wasn't what it needed to be. Also we couldn't match up with Michelle Terry."

Charlotta Jones had seven rebounds and had 12 points to follow Terry's tough play inside.

Stein saw a different Falcon team than EMU faced earlier in the season.

"Bowling Green has been playing better since that last time we played them," she said. "Their win over Ohio was significant."

Along with the win over Ohio and EMU, the Falcons knocked off Central Michigan to start a three-game winning streak and grab a firm hold of fourth place in the Mid-American Conference.

Larranaga said. "His performance tonight was just incredible. If anyone had told me that Jay and Anthony were going to be held under double figures before the game, I don't think I could have stood to go out there."

Ninkovic, from Milwaukee, Wis., has started 17 games this season and averaged just 5.8 points a game. He has taken a back seat this season to the headline names of Stacey, Jay Larranaga and Antonio Daniels.

But he took a back seat to no one Wednesday. He was 12-of-14 from the field and 10-of-12 from the free throw line. He had five rebounds and no turnovers in 37 minutes of play.

"I thought they got a really big performance from Dayton Ninkovic," Eagle coach Ben Braun said. "He knocked some shots down for them and he was accurate."

Ninkovic's play came up particularly big considering the Eagles' shutting down both Larranaga and Stacey. The two combined for just 14 points, 10 points below their combined average.

Ninkovic had 15 points by halftime for BG, but came even more alive after intermission. Benefiting from EMU's doubling down on Stacey, he found himself open underneath. Daniels and Larranaga each continually fed Ninkovic underneath, and he connected with his shots.

Offense wasn't Ninkovic's only weapon, either. He drew a crucial charge down the stretch in the second half, and started the game's key run for BG — a stretch where EMU turned the ball over three consecutive times with three minutes to go — by swatting away an Eagle pass.

Eastern Michigan led 29-24 with 3:30 left in the first half — after BG had opened the game with a 12-2 run — and was seemingly ready to run away with the game. But the Falcons scored the final 10 points of the half, the final bucket coming from Ninkovic down low off a pretty look from Stacey.

Falcon Notes

■ Eastern Michigan dominated the rebounding count in the game, outboarding the Falcons 42-26. BG was particularly burned on the offensive boards, where EMU had 22 of their 42.

Stacey's nine rebounds led the Falcons, while EMU received 11 from Derrick Dial and nine from James Head.

■ The win over EMU, which entered the game ranked 23rd in the national Associated Press poll, was the Falcons' second straight win over a ranked opponent in Anderson Arena. They defeated Michigan State in December of 1989.

Fair selected as defensive player of the week

Falcon senior defenseman Quinn Fair was chosen as the Cooper/CCHA defensive player of the week for the weekend of Feb. 9-10. Fair was a +6 on the weekend along with a goal and three assists in BG's wins at Illinois-Chicago and Notre Dame.

Roy moved to specialized hospital in Atlanta

USA Today has reported that Travis Roy has left Boston for a rehabilitation center in Atlanta to further his recovery from severe spinal cord damage.

The University of Boston Terrier freshman was paralyzed from the neck down just 11 seconds into his first shift of his first collegiate game Oct. 20.

The Shepherd Center in Atlanta specializes in treating spinal cord injuries and physicians felt Roy was ready.

"Travis achieved significant milestones during his recovery here, including independence from the ventilator and removal of his tracheotomy tube," said Susan Biener-Bergman, Roy's doctor at BU Medical Center. "He is medically stable and ready to begin the next phase of his rehabilitation."

His father, Lee, is still skeptical of Roy walking again, calling the possibility of Travis walking again "a miracle."

Illinois-Chicago struggling to keep Flames alive

The UIC Flames presently occupy last place in the CCHA with few indications of climbing out of the cellar anytime soon.

The Flames were scalded for 19 goals this past weekend (7 by the Falcons last Friday and 12 last Saturday by Michigan) and their 122 goals against this season ranks them first in that dubious category by 10 goals.

Their offensive firepower, which mustered only one goal in those two losses, resembles a Zippo lighter with only 56 goals scored on the year, also good for last in the league.

A revealing moment took place in the loss to the Falcons as the Flames were down 5-1 in the third period with less than seven minutes remaining in the game. UIC was going on the power play when head coach Larry Pedrie pulled his goal-tender for the extra attacker and a 6-on-4 man advantage.

Falcon junior left wing Brett Punched converted a Curtis Fry pass into the empty net seconds later snuffing out any chance of a Flames comeback with over six minutes still to play.

A comment more on the season than on the game.

Michigan's 148 goals on the season is tops in the CCHA, an amazing 43 goals better than next closest Michigan State with 105 ... Falcon junior defenseman Kelly Perrault joined junior center Curtis Fry and senior left wing Jason Clark in the 100-point club with an assist in Saturday's win over Notre Dame.

Rangers are only one of six teams interested in Gretzky

The Associated Press

Wayne Gretzky's days with the Los Angeles Kings appear to be numbered. But where is he going?

An NHL source said Wednesday he thinks the Kings will deal the Great One before the March 20 trading deadline.

"I do believe he will go," said the source, who asked not to be identified. "It's a deal that needs to be made."

However, Gretzky's agent said a trade wasn't imminent. While Gretzky was in Buffalo on Wednesday, agent Mike Barnett was traveling to Toronto for a junior game.

"If something was going on, I would be going to Buffalo," Barnett said.

Gretzky, who will become a free agent after this season, was scratched from Wednesday night's game against the Sabres with a hip pointer. The injury occurred in Tuesday's 9-4 loss to Detroit.

The New York Rangers and St. Louis Blues have already expressed interest in the NHL's career scoring leader. Other teams reportedly in the hunt are the Chicago Blackhawks, Anaheim Mighty Ducks, Philadelphia Flyers and Toronto Maple Leafs.

In New York, Gretzky's possible trade to the Rangers made headlines Wednesday.

"Gretzky-to-Rangers Talk May Not Be Just Rumors," The New York Times said.

"Will N.Y. Be Wayne's World?" asked the New York Post.

Playing in New York would offer Gretzky a high-profile market and a chance to play for a Stanley Cup contender that includes former Edmonton teammates Mark Messier and Kevin Lowe. The Rangers also are one of the few teams with enough money and trade bait to lure Gretzky.

But the team wasn't commenting Wednesday on a possible exchange that would send center Ray Ferraro and left wing Luc Robitaille to Los Angeles.

"Right now, Wayne Gretzky is still the property of the Los Angeles Kings, so we have nothing to say," Rangers spokesman Rob Koch said.

And what about the other teams reportedly interested in Gretzky?

Gretzky, 35, says he wants to play for a contender, which should eliminate lowly Anaheim.

Philadelphia has the money and is a top team, but Gretzky reportedly doesn't get along with Flyers star Eric Lindros.

That leaves Central Division rivals Chicago, Toronto and St. Louis, which are all jockeying for playoff positions in the Western Conference.

The Blackhawks apparently are willing to trade star Jeremy Roenick, who recently got into a dispute with Chicago general manager Bob Pulford. The Blues would probably offer a multi-player package for Gretzky, who would team with scoring standout Brett Hull.

Gretzky leads the Kings in scoring with 77 points, but isn't happy playing for a mediocre team that is mired in ninth place in the Western Conference, one spot out of the playoffs.

"Their team is really struggling," Detroit's Steve Yzerman said. "They don't have a lot of enthusiasm."

After failing to score against Detroit and suffering a hip pointer, Gretzky summed up his frustrated feeling.

"It the hip is not as sore as my ego," he said.

on Monday, and Antonio had only rejoined the team just prior to Tuesday's practice.

"Antonio and coach [Stan] Heath and I sat in my office and told him 'you don't have to do this,'" Larranaga said. "He told me he hadn't slept all night and hadn't eaten all day. He felt he had to play, because his brother Chris had planned on coming to this game.

"And then what a fitting way to end the game, with Antonio taking the ball to the basket and scoring the winning points."

The team mobbed Daniels in front of the bench after the final buzzer.

"I thought we played with great emotion all the way down the line," Stacey said. "I just kept telling myself that we were playing with a sixth man, that Chris was watching over us, and I think Antonio felt the same way."
